Policies

Focus and Scope:

The journal publishes unpublished research papers of teachers, researchers, students and citizens in all areas of knowledge, from Education Basic, Technique and Technology, from Graduate to lato and strict specializations . The Authors must disclose if the text is unpublished, that is, if it was not published.

Pluralist, the IΦ-Sophia Magazine refuses ideological framework and political party. The academic debate can not be authentic and dynamic if prisoner of the political and ideological strabismus who imagine themselves masters of truth, in ivory castles. The IΦ-Sophia it's not seen in the function of converting anyone and it's not directed only to the converted.

We understand that the reality is more complex than the preconceptions and these are not fertile ground for democratic debate, open to new prospects facing a world that requires going beyond conventional thought.

Freedom of expression, democratic plurality dispenses with the preconceptions and dogma. It's necessary courage and common effort are both to criticism as for self-criticism and for always being willing to changing ideas and polemicize.

This does not mean that the individual political-ideological positions express the collective of the journal. We are not a party-political organization or syndicate. We also do not accept the monolithic thought, be left or right.

The global reality requires placements. A critical theory will not be criticism if affirms itself a pseudo scientific neutrality.

The IΦ-Sophia does not convey racist, sexist content or injure the integrity of persons. It is defined by an ethical principle that could be summarized in two words: intellectual honesty, that is, the involvement of all those who collaborate with this space for reflection, to preserve the integrity of critical research, without any concession to the interests of nature partisan, ideological or restricted social sense.

Mission

Given the above, the IΦ-Sophia Magazine has the following objectives:

1. Disseminate critical reflection on the academic field, policy and society in general, in a pluralistic and democratic perspective;
2. Contribute to strengthen the linkages between formal spaces scientific knowledge and the spaces and social movements external to the community academic;
- 3 Facilitate the public record of knowledge and its preservation;
4. Disseminate information and knowledge generated by the community scientific and outside;
- 5 Expedite the process of scientific communication;
6. Contribute to the dissolution of the positivist preconception of separation between Philosophy and Science;
